From the plentifulness of bills at the close of the market for the steamer, and the modernte demand, it is doubtful if any spacie would have zone by her but for the remittance made by the agent of the Holland creditors of the Morris Caual. This created a demand for $100,000 of bills, out of the regular business want, and of course absorbed that amount which would have been on the market to supply regular remitters.—
The Holland debt was, we understand, compromised, before the sale of the Canal, by the company which afterward bought it, for $200,000. This amount was replaced by the $25 instalments on 30,000 shares, leaving the remaining 30,000 shares as a profit on the operation. The shares are selling at $1 a $2$, equal to $600,000, making the transaction rather a good thing for the useries connected with the purchase.
